CURRENT SITUATION/ WEATHER SUMMARY:

The best chances for rain today are in North Florida and along parts of the Nature Coast as an upper level disturbance moves through the region. Scattered showers and thunderstorms, some strong with frequent lightning, gusty winds, and heavy downpours, are expected this afternoon and into the early evening. Drier air aloft will limit activity in the Peninsula today, but an isolated shower or storm cannot be ruled out. Highs will be in the mid 80s to the lower 90s throughout the state, with the highest values expected in Central and South Florida. Heat index values may briefly reach 100 degrees in parts of the Peninsula this afternoon, but the drier air will generally keep those values lower than previous days.
