Hurricane Irma

The Florida State Emergency Response Team
September 21, 2017 - Published at 1400hrs
State Emergency Operations Center Activation Level: 1
Reporting Period: Sept. 21, 2017 0700hrs – Sept. 21, 2017 1900hrs
Information Current as of 1200hrs
Updated Information in Red

CURRENT SITUATION/ WEATHER SUMMARY:

Typical summertime conditions are expected today, with isolated to scattered showers and thunderstorms along the seabreeze boundaries. The best chance of rain today will be near the coast in the morning, then spreading inland and increasing over interior areas. Severe weather is not anticipated, but any thunderstorms that develop will be capable of producing dangerous lighting, gusty winds to 50mph and brief heavy downpours.

Otherwise, skies will be mostly sunny to partly cloudy with high temperatures this afternoon near normal in the upper 80s to low 90s. Heat index values may approach 100 degrees this afternoon in South Florida and the Keys. Winds will generally be from the northeast today at 5-10 mph.

Showers and storms should dissipate by midnight, but some showers may linger into the overnight hours along the coast. Clear to partly cloudy skies are expected statewide overnight, with low temperatures in the upper 60s to mid 70s inland across North and Central Florida and upper 70s to low 80s across South Florida. Some low clouds or patchy light fog is possible near sunrise across portions of North Florida and West Central Florida.

Tropical Storm Jose, Hurricane Maria and the remnants of Tropical Storm Lee do not pose a direct threat to Florida. However, increased waves from Maria are expected to reach the Florida East Coast beginning on Saturday and could result in additional coastal erosion.

As of this morning, 9 different rivers and creeks remain under River Flood Warnings. Most rivers have crested or are falling except portions of the St. Johns and the Withlacoochee at Croom and Trilby, which are nearing their crest. It will take several more days to weeks for the rivers to return to normal..
